Purpose

The Ethical Consultation Policy and Procedure (this Policy) provides a broad framework and specific guidance to ensure that consultation processes involving children and young people initiated by the Commissioner for Children and Young People (the Commissioner):

- are conducted ethically;
- are informed and guided by the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research 2007 (Updated May 2015);
- promote the wellbeing of children, young people and other participants; and
- respect and protect children, young people, and other participants from harm.\(^1\)

This Policy assists the Commissioner and staff within the Commissioner’s office (CCYP staff) to:

- meet their responsibilities to children, young people and other participants in consultation;
- identify ethical issues that arise in the design, review and conduct of consultation; and
- deliberate about those ethical issues, and justify decisions made about them.

\(^1\) The development of this policy has been informed by work done in other jurisdictions. We acknowledge in particular work by the WA Commissioner for Children and Young People, the NSW Advocate for Children and Young People, and the Scotland Commissioner for Children and Young People.
Policy Statement

The Commissioner and CCYP staff will conduct all consultations with children and young people in an ethical manner, with regard for the wellbeing of children, young people and other participants, and in a manner that affords them respect and protection from harm.

Before conducting a consultation, CCYP staff will assess the risks to the children, young people and other participants involved and document this assessment using the Ethics Review Self-Audit Tool (the Tool).

Consultation that is assessed to be of ‘negligible risk’ or ‘low risk’ can progress with the approval of the Commissioner.

Where consultation is assessed to have a risk value higher than ‘low risk’, the Commissioner will, depending on the assessed level of risk, seek advice and direction from an external ethics review expert (nominated by the Commissioner) on the ethical considerations related to the proposed consultation and on the design of the consultation. The Commissioner may also submit the consultation to a Human Research Ethics Committee (HREC) for review.

A completed ethics review must be approved by the Commissioner prior to commencement of any consultation.

The Commissioner and CCYP staff will continue to assess risk during consultation processes. If at any time during a consultation process, the Commissioner or a CCYP staff member identifies a risk that has not previously been identified, or is concerned the wellbeing of participants is being negatively impacted, or a participant is being harmed, the Commissioner or CCYP staff member will take immediate action to remedy this circumstance.

This Policy has implications for other policies of the Commissioner and, in turn relies on other policies. It should be read in conjunction with the policies set out at page 15.
Policy Detail

Definitions

Appropriate to age and maturity refers to the assessment that material and support provided to children and young people, questions asked of them, and processes of engagement align with their cognitive capacity to assess their own situation, consider possible options, express views, influence decision-making, understand another's perspective and think logically and conceptually within the context of cause and effect. This can alternatively be viewed as ensuring that the ways children and young people participate, the questions they are asked and the support provided must be tailored to the needs of the children and young people involved.

Consultation refers to the myriad of processes by which children and young people’s input and views on matters affecting them are sought.

Research, as used within this Policy, follows the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research 2007 in adopting a broad definition. This Policy conceptualises ‘research’ to be creative and systematic work undertaken to increase the stock of knowledge, which includes the involvement of human beings through:

- taking part in surveys, interviews or focus groups;
- being observed by researchers;
- researchers having access to their personal documents or other materials; and
- access to their information (in individually identifiable, re-identifiable or non-identifiable form) as part of an existing published or unpublished source or database.

Research includes non-traditional methods of data collection, for example online data collection via blogs and forums, and the collection of large level group data, for example through forums or workshops. Research does not include the development of teaching materials that do not embody original research.

Risk refers to a potential for harm, discomfort or inconvenience, and involves:

- the likelihood that a harm, discomfort or inconvenience will occur; and
- the severity of the harm, including its consequences.

Low Risk Consultation refers to consultations where the only foreseeable risk is that of discomfort.

Negligible Risk Consultation refers to consultations where there is no foreseeable risk of harm or discomfort, and any foreseeable risk is no more than inconvenience.
Who does this policy apply to?
The Commissioner and CCYP staff undertaking consultations with children and young people are responsible for implementing this Policy.

The Commissioner may, from time to time, procure consultation processes through external parties such as government or non-government organisations, consultants or researchers. Where the external party has no ethics review requirements of its own, this Policy will apply. Where the external party has its own ethics review process, the applicable ethics review process will be determined by the Commissioner on a case by case basis having regard for the wellbeing of children, young people and other participants, and in a manner that affords them respect and protection from harm. Where the relevant external party requires approval through a Human Research Ethics Committee (HREC), the consultation will require ethics review through that HREC in order to proceed.

What role and responsibilities does the Commissioner have when conducting consultations with children and young people?
Section 8 (1) of the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 outlines the Commissioner’s general functions which include:

8(1)(c) researching, investigating and influencing policy development in matters relating to children and young people generally; and 8(1)(d) promoting, monitoring and reviewing the wellbeing of children and young people generally.

The Act is clear that its administration must be in accordance with a range of principles, which include:

Section 3(2)(c) the contributions made by children to the community should be recognised for their value and merit;
Section 3(2)(d) the views of children on all matters affecting them should be given serious consideration and taken into account.

The Act also provides that the Commissioner must establish a Consultative Council of children and young people representing the diversity of the Tasmanian population.²

These provisions position consultation with children and young people as a key aspect of the Commissioner’s role and responsibilities

² See section 13(1)(a) and Schedule 2(3) of the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016
Further, in performing functions, or exercising powers, under the Act, the Commissioner must have regard to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (the Convention). One of the four guiding principles of the Convention is that children have the right to express their views and to be heard in all matters affecting them and for adults to give their views due weight in accordance with the child’s age and maturity. This principle is described in Article 12 of the Convention. Article 13 also relates to participation.

Article 12: Every child has the right to have a say in all matters affecting them, and to have their views taken seriously.

Article 13: Every child must be free to say what they think and to seek and receive all kinds of information, as long as it is within the law.

In fulfilling her/his functions, the Commissioner must ensure that the wellbeing and best interests of children and young people are paramount, and that children are protected from harm and exploitation. In this context, it is fundamentally important that any consultation undertaken by the Commissioner or CCYP staff promotes the wellbeing and best interests of the children and young people involved, and is undertaken in a manner which protects and treats children and young people with respect.

Guiding Principles

The Commissioner’s approach to consultation with children and young people is informed and guided by the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research 2007 (Updated May 2015) (the National Statement). The following principles are drawn from the National Statement to guide all consultation processes conducted by the Commissioner and CCYP staff:

- Safety – Consultation conducted by the Commissioner and CCYP staff must be safe, and the wellbeing of all children and young people involved must be paramount. In this context, the Commissioner and CCYP staff are responsible for:
  - designing the consultation to minimise the risks of harm or discomfort to participants;
  - seeking external ethics review in accordance with this policy where consultation is assessed to have a risk value higher than ‘low risk’;

— clarifying for participants the potential benefits and risks of the consultation; and — safeguarding the wellbeing of the participants in the consultation.

- Merit – No consultation will be conducted unless the Commissioner deems it to have merit. To have merit, consultation must:
  — contribute to knowledge and understanding of the issues that affect and challenges that face children and young people in Tasmania;
  — be justified by its potential benefit, which may include to improve social welfare, health and wellbeing of children and young people; and
  — be based on a thorough study of current literature.

- Respect – In conducting consultation, the Commissioner and CCYP staff will, at all times, recognise the intrinsic worth of all children, young people and other participants. This includes:
  — having due regard for the welfare, beliefs, perceptions, customs and cultural heritage of the children and young people involved;
  — respecting the privacy and confidentiality of the participants;
  — fulfilling any specific agreements made with the participants;
  — giving due scope to the capacity of children and young people to make their own decisions;
  — empowering children and young people to make their own decisions; and — providing for their care and protection.

- Integrity – All consultation conducted by the Commissioner will be conducted with integrity. This means that consultation is:
  — designed to ensure that respect for the participants is not compromised by the aims of the consultation, by the way it is carried out, or by the results;
  — informed and guided by recognised principles of research conduct;
  — conducted honestly with full disclosure of consultation aims, objectives and processes at every point; and — undertaken with full dissemination and communication of results, whether favourable or unfavourable, in ways that permit scrutiny and contribute to public understanding of the Commissioner’s consultation processes.

- Justice – All consultation conducted by the Commissioner is just, with the consultation aligning with the principles of the Act and relevant provisions of the Convention. This principle focuses on:
  — the selection, exclusion and inclusion of categories of participants being fair and accurately described in the outcomes of the consultation;
  — the process of recruiting participants is fair;
  — there is no unfair burden of participation on particular groups;
— there is fair distribution of the benefits of participation;
— there is no exploitation of participants in the conduct of consultation; and — there is fair access to the benefits of consultation.

- Privacy and confidentiality – Children and young people have a right to participate in consultation, while being assured that their rights to privacy and confidentiality are respected (within the limits to confidentiality defined in the Consent Policy).

- Informed consent – Informed consent to participate is always sought from children and young people, as well as their parent/guardian, in accordance with the Consent Policy.

Other Special Considerations

The Commissioner has regard for the interests and needs of all Tasmanian children and young people but, in accordance with the Act\(^9\), has special regard for those who may be vulnerable or disadvantaged for any reason.

We aim to actively include children and young people in consultation processes who are:

- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander and living in Tasmania;
- Culturally and linguistically diverse (CALD), new immigrant or refugee;
- LGBTI (lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans or intersex) \(^10\); and
- People living with disability.

We also seek to build lasting relationships with the organisations that provide services for, or engage with, children and young people, or are comprised of children and young people themselves.

In conducting consultation processes with children and young people who are vulnerable or disadvantaged, or for whom special considerations may arise, the Commissioner will seek guidance and advice from community and cultural leaders, parents and carers, and people experienced in working with these children and young people.

Any consultation undertaken by the Commissioner’s staff or by external parties on behalf of the Commissioner will:

1. Acknowledge or take into account the specific:

\(^9\) See section 3(2)(b) of the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016

\(^10\) The Commissioner understands there are a range of terms and definitions that people use to define their gender or sexuality. We use the broad term LGBTI to inclusively refer to all people who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans and intersex, as well as to represent other members of the community who use different terms to describe their diverse sexuality and/or gender.
— cultural needs of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander children and young people and those from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds — needs of vulnerable or disadvantaged children and young people, and
— needs of those with cognitive or other impairments, particularly where these issues may impinge upon the ability to provide informed consent to participation.

2. Be informed and guided by the Guidelines for Ethical Conduct in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Research.

In this way, we ensure that we engage and involve children and young people in consultation processes that:

• are culturally appropriate, respectful of cultural rights, values, expectations, practices and protocols;
• consider the diversity and uniqueness of a community or group – avoiding a “one size fits all” approach;
• protect and promote children and young people’s best interests;
• empower, support and encourage children and young people to participate meaningfully; and
• seek their advice and feedback on how they would like to participate.

Utilising appropriate consultation methods
Any consultation undertaken by the Commissioner or CCYP staff will utilise methods that are appropriate to the age and maturity of the children and young people involved, and which recognise their cognitive, emotional, behavioural, safety, expressive and other needs.

It is expected that innovative approaches will assist children and young people’s participation in consultations, and will deliver strategies to minimise risk, increase engagement and improve outcomes for all the parties.

Any consultation undertaken by the Commissioner or CCYP staff will:

1. Obtain ‘Informed Consent’ from children and young people and their parents/guardians as described by the Consent Policy. Informed consent will be obtained from children and young people and their parents/guardians prior to their participation in any consultation. Children and young people’s involvement in consultation is voluntary and they will be informed that they can withdraw their consent at any time.

2. Maintain the confidentiality and privacy of the children and young people who participate. This will include de-identifying survey and interview transcript records; securing a confidential database, locked storage and/or disposal of all identifiable documents. This also includes only publishing images, names and other identifying information in accordance with the specific signed consent forms for the image or text (refer to the Consent Policy and Policy on Images of Children and Young People).

Ethics review process

All consultation with children and young people undertaken by or on behalf of the Commissioner will require ethics review.

Ethics review will include self-audit (refer to the Ethics Review Self-Audit Tool in the Appendix to this Policy).

Depending on the results of the self-audit the project may also require review by an external ethics review expert and/or by a HREC.

The completed ethics review will be approved by the Commissioner prior to commencement of consultation.

See Ethics Review Flow Chart overleaf.
Who will undertake the consultation?

- CCYP
- Government department
- University, NGO or other

Does the external party:
- a) require approval by a HREC; or
- b) have its own ethics review process?

No

Complete ethics review self-audit tool.
Did you answer 'yes' to all questions in Part A and 'no' to all questions in Part B of the tool?

Attach self-audit and submit together with a modified External Ethics Review Report form to an external ethics review expert nominated by the Commissioner for review.

Has external expert recommended the consultation be approved by the Commissioner?

Yes

Ethics self-audit and external expert advice should be attached to the consultation project plan for approval by the Commissioner.

No

Consider any modifications that can be made in light of feedback from external expert. Any modified proposal must be re-submitted to external expert for further review and recommendation.

If external expert does not recommend the consultation be approved by the Commissioner, the consultation proposal must be submitted to a HREC for approval to proceed.

The consultation presents negligible or low risk to participants and facilitators. The completed ethics self-audit should be submitted with the consultation project plan for approval by the Commissioner.

a. If yes to a), the consultation requires ethics review by HREC to proceed.

b. If yes to b), the applicable ethics review process is to be determined by the Commissioner in consultation with external party.
Use of incentives
Participation in consultations should be voluntary, and participants should be free from any coercion or inducement to take part.

Small incentives may be used to recognise participation. Where incentives are offered, consideration should be given to the health, safety and wellbeing of participants. For example, small tokens such as vouchers, movie tickets or stationery will be given in preference to energy dense foods or drinks.

Where used, incentives should not be contingent upon completion of the consultation where this could be construed as a penalty for withdrawing.

Reimbursement of expenses
Where expenses are incurred by a participant as a result of their participation in CCYP consultation processes, for example transport costs, these may be reimbursed by the Commissioner for Children and Young People. A decision to reimburse is at the discretion of the Commissioner and determinations are made on a case by case basis. The Commissioner and/or CCYP staff will endeavour to ascertain any potential cost implications with participants prior to any consultation.

Complaints Processes
A clear complaints process which is accessible to children and young people and information regarding this process will be provided to all participants. See the Complaints Management Policy.
Procedure

The following procedure will guide decision-making in relation to the ethical considerations associated with the Commissioner’s consultation processes.

Step 1: Formulating the consultation proposal.

CCYP staff will formulate a consultation proposal, which provides an outline of:

- The purpose of the consultation;
- The mandate for the consultation;
- The intended consultation process, including details of actual project activities; and
- An assessment of risk to children, young people and other participants in the consultation.

Step 2: Assessing Risk

As a key element of formulating a consultation proposal, CCYP staff will assess the risk to children, young people and other participants associated with the consultation. The assessment of risks involves:

- identifying any risks;
- gauging their probability and severity;
- assessing the extent to which they can be minimised; and
- determining how they can be managed.

CCYP staff will commence the process by conducting a brainstorming process to develop a body of information based on each risk assessment element identified in the dot-points above.

CCYP staff will then complete the ‘Ethics Review Self-Audit Tool’. This form must be attached to the consultation proposal document, which is provided to the Commissioner for approval.

Refer to Ethics Review Self-Audit Tool (Appendix).
Step 3: Consultation where the risk level is ‘negligible risk’ or ‘low risk’

Where the Tool completed by CCYP staff indicates that the risk level is ‘negligible risk’ or ‘low risk’, the consultation proposal may be approved by the Commissioner without further work.

Step 4: Consultation where the risk level is higher than ‘low risk’

The Commissioner will, in consultation with CCYP staff:

- revise the consultation proposal, and the activities involved, so that the risk level can subsequently be assessed as ‘negligible risk’ or ‘low risk’; or
- seek advice and direction from an external ethics review expert (nominated by the Commissioner) on how the consultation project may ethically proceed.

Where advice and direction is sought from an external ethics review expert, the Commissioner will request they advise on how the risk could be fully mitigated or minimised, whether the risk is justified in the context of the benefits of the consultation, and/or whether the risk can be appropriately managed to ensure that the participants are not harmed in any way.

An external ethics review expert may provide advice formally, in the form of a written document, or informally through discussion with the Commissioner.

Step 5: Consent

Where the Commissioner determines that a consultation process will proceed, either as it is assessed to be ‘negligible risk’ or ‘low risk’, or as a consequence of advice provided by an external ethics review expert, the consent of all participants will be obtained.

For further information on the Commissioner’s consent processes, refer to the Consent Policy.

Step 6: Continuing Assessment of Risk in Consultation Processes

CCYP staff will continue to assess risk to children, young people and other participants at each point in the consultation process.

Where new risks are identified or risks previously identified have not been effectively mitigated, advice will be immediately provided to the Commissioner. The Commissioner will take immediate action to ensure that the risk is immediately addressed. Options include, but are not limited to:

- immediately ceasing the consultation process;
- providing appropriate support and assistance to any affected participant and taking action to end their participation in the consultation process;
- providing appropriate support and assistance to any affected participant so that they may continue in the consultation process if they wish to do so;
• altering the consultation process; and
• seeking advice and direction from an external ethics review expert.

In taking action to address risks, the Commissioner’s primary concern is the safety and wellbeing of the children, young people and other participants involved in the consultation.

Purpose of the Ethics Review Self Audit Tool

The Ethical Consultation Policy and Procedure (the Policy) provides a broad framework and specific guidance to ensure that consultation processes involving children and young people initiated by the Commissioner for Children and Young People (the Commissioner):

- are conducted ethically;
- are informed and guided by the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research 2007 (Updated May 2015);
- promote the wellbeing of children, young people and other participants; and
- respect and protect children, young people, and other participants from harm.\(^\text{11}\)

Under the Policy, the Commissioner and CCYP staff will conduct all consultation processes with children and young people in an ethical manner, with regard for the wellbeing of children, young people and other participants, and in a manner that affords them respect and protection from harm.

Before conducting a consultation, CCYP staff will assess the risks to the children, young people and other participants involved and document this assessment using this Ethics Review Self-Audit Tool.

This tool must be completed for each consultation process involving children and young people, and must be approved by the Commissioner as a part of the consultation planning process.

\(^{11}\) The development of this tool has been informed by work done in other jurisdictions. We acknowledge in particular work by the WA Commissioner for Children and Young People.

Part A – Ethical Considerations

1. Given the intended target audience of the consultation process, is it appropriate to the age and maturity of the children and young people involved?

☐ Yes  ☐ No

If ‘Yes’, provide detail of how the consultation has been designed to be appropriate to the age and maturity of the children and young people involved:

<Insert Details>

2. Does the consultation process have merit?
   • Will it contribute to the knowledge and understanding of the issues that affect, and challenges that face, children and young people in Tasmania?
   • Will it be justified by its potential benefit?

☐ Yes  ☐ No

If ‘Yes’, provide detail of the merit of the consultation process:
